

In re Burke, Case No. 305-31572

Trustee objected to debtor's claim of exemption in funds that had been subject to a pre-bankruptcy garnishment by FMCC and were still being held by the bank. Prior to the garnishment, the funds had been held in a bank account which debtor owned jointly with her live in boyfriend. Debtor claimed the exemption pursuant to ORS 18.345(1)(n) which provides that a debtor may exempt her "... right to receive an earned income tax credit under the federal tax laws and any moneys that are traceable to a payment of an earned income tax credit under the federal tax laws." The trustee conceded that the debtor was entitled to an exemption in her earned income tax refund, but contended that the funds, which had been commingled with non-exempt funds, were no longer identifiable as earned income credit funds and were therefore not exempt.

The court disagreed. It found that the trustee was apparently basing his argument on the language of ORS 18.348 which provides that otherwise exemptible funds held a bank account retain their exempt status only if they remain "identifiable." It noted, however, that ORS 18.348 applied only to specific enumerated statutes and did not apply to the Earned Income Exemption statute under which earned income funds were exempt provided they remained "traceable".

The court found the distinction between "identifiable" funds and "traceable" funds to be important. It recognized that the requirement in ORS 18.348 that funds be "identifiable" might require that funds held in an account subject to exemption under that statute be exactly the same funds in which the debtor could claim an exemption. However, it found that the concept of tracing is not used to identify specific funds, but rather to "segregate property that has been commingled with other property in such a manner that it has lost its identity." Thus, it concluded, the earned income funds remained exempt after they were commingled with other non-exempt funds provided the some method of tracing would allow the court to segregate the exempt from the non-exempt funds.

In this case both the debtor and FMCC contended that the proper method of tracing funds contained in the bank account was the "first in, first out" accounting method. They also agreed that where exempt and non-exempt funds were deposited on the same day, the funds should be allocated on a percentage basis. The court agreed and applied these two accounting methods to determine that the funds held in the bank account as of the date of filing were "traceable" to the debtor's earned income refund.

The debtor also claimed an exemption in an Oregon State tax refund received the day after the filing. Debtor spent the refund but was not entitled to the exemption. Accordingly, the court allowed the trustee to offset the amount of the refund against the garnishment funds being released to the debtor by way of an equitable surcharge.

12 In re) Case No. 305-31572-tmb7
13 LAUREL LEANNE BURKE,) MEMORANDUM OPINION
14 Debtor.)

15 This matter came before the court on the objections of the Trustee and Ford Motor Credit Company
16 (“FMCC”) to the Debtor’s claim of exemption in funds held in a US Bank Checking Account. The Trustee
17 Kenneth S. Eiler represented himself. FMCC was represented by Chelsea S. Lewandowski and the Debtor
18 was represented by Kathryn E. Eaton.

19 Following the hearing held on April 28, 2005, I took this matter under advisement. I have reviewed 20 my notes, the exhibits, and the pleadings and other submissions in the file and considered applicable legal 21 authorities. I have also considered carefully the oral testimony and arguments presented and have read
22 counsel's submissions in detail. The following findings of fact and legal conclusions constitute the court's 23 findings under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 52(a), applicable in this proceeding under Federal Rule of 24 Bankruptcy Procedure 9014.

1 FACTS

2 The facts in this case are undisputed. Prior to the bankruptcy filing the Debtor maintained a joint
3 checking account at US Bank with her live-in boyfriend, John Thompson ("Thompson"). Both the Debtor
4 and Thompson made deposits and withdrawals from the account for personal and household purposes. The 5 Debtor received a 2004 federal tax refund on February 11, 2004, in the amount of $3,884.00. Of this sum,
6 67.04% was due to the Debtor's Earned Income Credit ("EIC").

7 A history of the activity in the Debtor's joint checking account between January 27, 2005, and March 8 7, 2005, reveals the following:

US Bank, which had not yet forwarded the garnished funds to FMCC at the time of the bankruptcy filing, is holding the $2,849.15 pending instructions from the court as to their proper disbursement.

At the time of filing the Debtor claimed the following exemptions on her Schedule C:

DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY	SPECIFIC LAW PROVIDING EACH EXEMPTION	VALUE OF CLAIMED EXEMPTION	CURRENT MARKET VALUE OF PROPERTY WITHOUT DEDUCTING EXEMPTIONS
books, pictures	ORS 18.345(1)(a)	600.00	100.00

1 On March 23, 2005, the Trustee filed an Objection to Claimed Exemptions in which he objected the 2 Debtor's claim of exemption in the funds held in the US Bank account relating to the EIC refund in the 3 amount of $2,604.00, to the Oregon State tax refund in the amount of $762.00, and $320.00 non-EIC tax
4 refund. In support of his objection the Trustee stated that "it appears that all of these funds were 5 commingled with non exempt funds and with third party funds. The Debtor can claim an exemption in these 6 assets of no more than $400.00."

7 On March 31, 2005, the Debtor filed a Request for Hearing on Trustee's Objection to Claimed 8 Exemption. In her Request the Debtor asked that the objection be disallowed, arguing that the funds in the 9 bank account included "$2,604.00 traceable to Earned Income Credit of the Debtor. The Debtor is entitled 10 to a $400.00 exemption on the remaining amount." No mention was made as to the $762.00 Oregon income 11 tax refund received by the Debtor post-petition.

12 On April 21, 2005, FMCC filed an Objection to Claimed Exemption in which it, like the Trustee, 13 argued that the Debtor could exempt no more than $400 of the garnished funds because she had 14 "commingled non-exempt funds with allegedly exempt funds."

15 LEGAL ANALYSIS

16 Section 522(b) of the Bankruptcy Code allows a Debtor to exempt certain property from the 17 bankruptcy estate. Exemptions may be based on state or federal law unless the applicable state law
18 specifically prohibits use of the federal exemptions. Id. Oregon law provides that residents of this state shall 19 not be entitled to claim the federal exemptions. ORS 18.300, see In re Godfrey, 102 B.R. 769, 771 (9th Cir.
20 BAP 1989). Consequently, the Debtor's right to her claimed exemptions must be determined by Oregon
21 State law. See In re Osworth, 234 B.R. 497, 498 (9th Cir. BAP 1999)

22 ORS 18.345(1)(n) allows a Debtor to exempt "[t]he debtor's right to receive an earned income tax
23 credit under the federal tax laws and any moneys that are traceable to a payment of an earned income tax
24 credit under the federal tax laws." (emphasis added)

1 The Debtor, relying on this statute, contends that a portion of the money subject to the garnishment
2 consisted of her EIC and that she is, therefore, entitled to an exemption in those funds and an order directing 3 US Bank to release the exempt funds to her. She concedes that the exempt portion of the tax refund has been 4 commingled with other funds, but contends that the court can easily determine, using a first-in, first out
5 tracing methodology, that all of the funds subject to the garnishment are traceable to her IRS refund. She 6 further concedes that the initial IRS deposit consisted of both exempt and nonexempt funds, but argues that 7 “when exempt and non-exempt funds are deposited the same day, a pro rata allocation should be used to 8 apportion exempt from non-exempt funds.” She argues $2,604.00 or 67.04 percent of the deposited funds
9 consisted of exempt earned income credit. Consequently, she contends, she is entitled to claim an exemption
10 in 67.04 percent of the funds remaining in the account on the day preceding the garnishment.

11 FMCC agrees with the Debtor’s contention that the court should use the “first in, first out”
12 accounting method and a pro rata allocation to determine the amount of the exemption to which the Debtor is 13 entitled. It contends, however, that the amount of the exemption should be 67.04 percent of the garnished
14 funds rather than 67.04 percent of the funds in the account on the day preceding the garnishment.

15 The Trustee disagrees with both the Debtor and FMCC. He contends that under Oregon law
16 otherwise exempt funds remain exempt after deposit in a bank account only if those funds are “clearly 17 identifiable.” Thus, he contends, exempt funds lose their exempt status when commingled with other funds 18 in a bank account.

19 The Trustee apparently bases his argument on the language of ORS 18.348. This statute provides:

20 “18.348 Certain funds exempt when deposited in account; limitations. (1) All funds
21 exempt from execution and other process under ORS 18.358, 18.385 (2) to (4), 238.445,
22 344.580, 348.863, 401.495, 407.595, 411.760, 412.115, 412.610, 413.130, 414.095, 655.530, 23 656.234, 657.855, and 748.207 and section 3101, title 38, United States Code and section 407, title 42, United States Code shall remain exempt when deposited in an account of a judgment debtor as long as the exempt funds are identifiable.” (emphasis added)

24 The Trustee’s reliance on this statute is misplaced. By its terms it applies only to specific enumerated
25 statutes and does not apply to the statute under which the Debtor has claimed an exemption in her EIC
26 refund. By contrast, the statute allowing an exemption for EIC does not require that the funds remain

1 “identifiable” to be exempt. Rather, that statute allows a debtor to claim an exemption in an earned income
2 tax credit “and any moneys that are traceable to a payment of an earned income tax credit under the federal
3 tax laws.” ORS 18.345(1)(n)

4 I believe that this distinction is important. The requirement that funds on deposit be “identifiable” to 5 be exempt under ORS 18.238 may, arguably, require that Debtor establish that the funds at issue are exactly
6 the same funds in which the Debtor could claim an exemption under one of the statutes enumerated in ORS
7 18.238, thereby making this exemption unavailable where exempt funds have been commingled with 8 nonexempt funds. By contrast, the concept of “tracing” is used to segregate property that has been 9 commingled with other property in such a manner that it has lost its identity. “ ‘The goal of “tracing” is not 10 to trace anything at all in many cases, but rather [to] serve[] as an equitable substitute for the impossibility 11 of specific identification.’ ” United States v. Henshaw, 388 F.3d 738, 741 (10th Cir. 2004) (citations omitted).
12 Thus, under Oregon law, debtors may exempt money “traceable” to EIC despite the fact that it has been 13 commingled with other funds, making it impossible to specifically identify the exempt funds.

14 There are several alternative methods of tracing, “none of which is optimal for all commingling
15 case.” Henshaw at 741. “Courts exercise case-specific judgment to select the method best suited to achieve 16 a fair and equitable result on the facts before them.” Id. Here the Debtor recommends use of the “first in,
17 first out” method of tracing funds. FMCC agrees that this is a reasonable method to use to trace the funds at 18 issue. The Trustee offered no opinion as to whether the use of the “first in, first out” method was appropriate
19 nor did he suggest the use of any other method. Consequently, the court will use the first in, first out method
20 to trace the Debtor’s earned income credit. However, before doing so I must first address the issue raised by 21 the fact that the Debtor’s tax refund included both a regular tax refund, which is not exempt, and the EIC, 22 which is exempt.

23 The Debtor suggests that, for tracing purposes, the court should allocate exempt and nonexempt
24 funds on a percentage basis where both exempt and nonexempt funds were deposited into an account on the 25 same day. This approach appears logical and reasonable and no party has put forth an alternative method of 26

1 allocation. Consequently, should I determine that the funds subject to the garnishment are traceable to the 2 Debtor's tax refund, I will use the percentage method to apportion the exempt from the nonexempt funds.

3 As shown by the facts above, at the time the tax refund was deposited into the Debtor's bank account
4 on February 11, 2005, the balance in the account was $1,474.07. The tax refund totaling $3,884.00 would 5 have raised the balance in the account to $5,308.07, but additional withdrawals on that date reduced the 6 balance to $5,078.00. No additional deposits were made to the account between February 11, 2005, and 7 February 16, 2005, the date of the garnishment. However, during that time the bank posted withdrawals of 8 $1,859.24 against the account, leaving a balance of $3,213.76 in the account the day before the garnishment.

9 Under the first in, first out tracing method, the $1,474.07 balance in the account before the tax refund
10 would have been the first moneys withdrawn to cover the withdrawals made between February 11 and 11 February 16, 2005. Thereafter, the only funds remaining in the account are traceable to the tax refund
12 deposit. Consequently, to the extent that the tax refund was exempt, the funds subject to the garnishment 13 were also exempt.

14 FMCC's garnishment totaled $2,849.15, of which 67.04 percent is $1,910.07.¹ Consequently the 15 Debtor is entitled to exempt that amount of the total funds held by the bank under ORS 18.345(1)(n). In 16 addition, the Debtor is entitled to claim $400.00 as her pour over exemption under ORS 18.345(1)(o).
17 However, since she had $12.66 in her checking account on the date of filing only $387.34 of the garnished
18 funds would be entitled to an exemption under ORS 18.345(1)(o). Accordingly, the Debtor would be 19 entitled to an exemption in the garnished funds in the amount of $2,297.41. The Trustee would be entitled to 20 the remaining funds in the amount of $551.74.

23 ¹ The Debtor argues that she is entitled to exempt 67.04% of the funds in the account on the day
24 preceding the garnishment. She is incorrect. The Debtor retained access to the balance of the funds in the 25 account after the garnishment and, in fact, a portion of those funds were used to pay charges posted to the 26 account on the date of the garnishment. Thus, the bulk of those funds had ceased to exist at the time of the filing and were no longer subject to the Debtor's claim of exemption.

However, the Debtor also claimed an exemption under ORS 18.348 for her Oregon tax refund in the amount of $762.00 received the day after the case was filed. However, none of the provisions of ORS 18.348 apply to the Oregon tax refund. Accordingly, the Debtor's claimed exemption as to that amount is disallowed. Because the Debtor's claim of exemption in the Oregon tax refund is denied, she has a duty under 11 U.S.C. § 542 to turn these funds over to the Trustee. Unfortunately, the Debtor spent those funds shortly after they were received and they are no longer available for turnover.

Given this fact, I find that the Trustee is entitled to offset the amount owed to him by the Debtor against the Debtor's EIC. See Latman v. Burdette, 366 F.3d 774, 786 (9th Cir. Wash. 2004) ("bankruptcy court may equitably surcharge a debtor's statutory exemptions when reasonably necessary both to protect the integrity of the bankruptcy process and to ensure that a debtor exempts an amount no greater than what is permitted by the exemption scheme of the Bankruptcy Code") and In re Ward, 210 B.R. 531, 537-38 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1997) (trustee entitled to offset amount of nonexempt assets kept or spent post-petition against exempt funds he is holding).

Accordingly, of the $2,489.15 held by US Bank, $1,535.41 ($2,297.41 - $762.00) should be paid to the Debtor and $1,313.74 ($551.74 + $762.00) should be paid to the Trustee. Counsel for the Debtor should submit an order consistent with this memorandum within 10 days.
